J.S.U.-Hillel Forum draws good notices

By Ari Elieff

Was it a cock-fight between Arabs and Jews left unresolved, or did the Jewish Students' Union — Hillel finally succeed in legitimizing the perspective at Ottawa University?

Countering the overwhelming Arab presence that has existed on that campus for the last seven years has been difficult for JSU-Hillel. While the Arab students have staged Palestinian Days, Syrian Days, Egyptian Days and Muslim Days, the Jewish students have maintained a low profile.

Recently, however, JSU-Hillel formed a political action committee and sponsored its first event on Tuesday afternoon, January 19 at Ottawa U. At least 300 students attended an open forum on "Jews From Arab Lands" which was conducted in French for francophones.

Speakers from Montreal

Jacques LaSalle, Director of Information for Quebec Israel Committee, Maurice Sadeh, founder of Quebec Committee for Jews of Arab Countries and Maurice Shalom, Co-ordinator for Quebec Israel Students' Committee, came from Montreal to speak. Ottawa professor Philip Hauptman, Director of the Center for Second Language Learning, moderated the event.

The 90 minute program began smoothly enough with opening remarks by LaSalle. He spoke of the 600,000 Jewish refugees from Arab lands absorbed by Israel in the three years following independence. Sadeh followed with accounts of Jewish persecution in Arab countries since 1947.

A block of 20 Arab students objected to the facts and figures the speakers delivered and to the maps, pamphlets and books JSU-Hillel gave to the audience. They dominated the question period and turned it into a shouting match which strayed far from the topic.

Shalom refuted Israel's detractors with ease. Nevertheless, he was dismayed that the Jews present allowed the discussion to get out of hand, as it was not informative for non-Arab students.

Pleased with outcome

Nissen Chackowicz, JSU-Hillel Co-ordinator, was very pleased with the outcome of the forum. He felt it boosted the morale of Jewish students on campus and established a second point of view, which had been lacking. "More importantly," he said, "activity breeds experience."

Foundation grants

$109,275 is distributed

A wide variety of educational, charitable, and social service agencies in Ottawa and Israel will be the beneficiaries of grants for 1981 announced by the Ottawa Jewish Community Endowment and Bequest Foundation. According to Norman Zagerman, president of the Foundation, over $109,275 has been distributed. It represents income earned during the year from invested capital which has been contributed to the various funds administered by the Foundation.

The Grants and Allocations Committee makes its recommendations to the Board of Directors of the Foundation after reviewing all the data available. Most of the segregated funds provide for consultation with the donor or family each year and their preferences are taken into account in the over-all submission.

Vaad Report

by Joseph Lief

President, Ottawa Vaad Ha'Ir
Jewish Community Council

The Community Relations job defined

Originally, the Community Relations Committee of the Council was formed to foster interfaith understanding and respect; to co-operate with other groups active in this field; to act as community spokesman in matters of public relations; to maintain a watching brief on anti-Jewish manifestations; and to initiate adequate responses in consultation with the Officers and Executive Committee.

Along the way, it assumed the responsibilities of the National Capital Branch of the Canada-Israel Committee which develops programs within the Jewish and general community in conjunction with the objectives of the National Canada-Israel Committee. And finally, when we found that there was a dearth of information available to members of the Jewish Community about Jewish issues of a global nature, we asked the Committee to bring that topic under its rubric as well.

Community Relations Co-Chairmen Murray Ages and Merida Sachs have reconstituted their Committee in accordance with this mandate. Essentially, the responsibilities have been assigned to eleven working groups. They are as follows:

1. Community Forums, headed by Carol Kassie, Heidi Polowin and Gaye Applebaum. These are community-wide information evenings on timely topics of broad general interest.
2. Community Seminars, headed by Elaine Wolfish. These are designed for more intensive exploration of specific subjects. The November Seminar, for example, dealt with the Middle East and the View from Washington, Ottawa and the Arab World, in particular.
3. Media Monitoring, chaired by Dr. Eli Rabin. For the time being at least, Dr. Rabin and his associates are concentrating on newspapers either published or coming into Ottawa. Their recent brief to The Citizen was extremely well done.
4. Neighborhood Gatherings, under the supervision of Merida Sachs. These use the social setting of the home to bring together people in neighborhoods for discussions on the local community and Israel.
5. Interfaith Dialogue. The Committee is in formation. When it begins to function, it will reach out into the general community with a view to developing contacts and coalitions within the broad context of multiculturalism.
6. Canada-Israel Committee Liaison. Charles Dalfen represents Ottawa on the National Administrative Board of C.I.C.
7. Political Contacts, headed by Stella Torontow. Will liaise with M.P.'s at the federal and provincial levels.
8. Shalom Ottawa with Merida Sachs as producer. Five pilot cablevision programs are scheduled between now and the end of June. The first half-hour will be aired on Thursday, February 11 at 8:30 p.m. on Skyline Cablevision.
9. Schools, co-chaired by Professors Aviva Freedman and Conrad Winn. The Committee will address a number of subjects including school examinations, curricula, text books and the like.
10. Universities, headed by Professors Michael Bendel and Shalom Lappin. The campuses are being flooded with materials inimical to Jewish interests and the Committee will seek ways to counteract the propaganda barrage.
11. Public Relations. Ari Elieff has undertaken responsibility for gathering and editing information from various sources and readying it for publication in the Ottawa Jewish Bulletin as a regular feature.

Anyone who would like to help out is asked to contact either of the Co-Chairmen or the Staff Co-ordinator, Noa Heilman, at 232-7306.

J.S.U.-Hillel developing firm roots

The Jewish Students Union-Hillel Foundation of Ottawa is developing an increased visibility as the year progresses. According to Nissen Chackowicz, the JSU-Hillel Co-Ordinator, the organization feels very much a part of the university and Jewish communities and is firmly committed to both.

I was pleased to hear that the panel discussion on "Jews from Arab Lands" (all in French) held at the University of Ottawa on January 19 attracted over 300 people. Jacques LaSalle, Maurice Sadeh and Moshe Shalom came from Montreal to speak. They made an able presentation that Israel has served as a refuge for hundreds of thousands of Jews who have fled persecution from Arab countries. Co-Ordinator Chackowicz feels that the session helped to set the record straight since Arab students, he says, consistently misrepresent the facts and stereotype all Jews and Israelis as Aryans.

In other developments, JSU-Hillel and the University of Ottawa are co-operating in promoting an Israeli Poster Exhibit and co-sponsoring a lecture-slide presentation on the surviving elderly Jews in the South Bronx area of New York at the Jewish Community Centre on Sunday evening, February 14.

In community affairs generally, university students are now taking active roles in several forums and projects. They can be seen regularly at meetings of the Board of Trustees of the Vaad and as active participants in the work of the Community Relations Committee, Shalom Ottawa and as contributors to the Ottawa Jewish Bulletin.

These are encouraging developments and I am pleased that the groundwork is beginning to pay off. We on our part, in conjunction with the B'nai B'rith Lodges of Ottawa who co-sponsor JSU-Hillel with us, will continue to give the young people and their leadership the support the program so richly deserves.

Greenberg bequest is received

The Officers and Directors of the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation acknowledge with deep appreciation receipt of a $100,000. bequest provided in the will of Gilbert Greenberg, the Founding President of the Foundation.

J.T.A. News in brief

It will be the first by a French chief of state. A party of French officials is due in Israel Tuesday to co-ordinate plans for the visit with Israeli officials.

The Friends of Former Auschwitz Inmates has issued a call for immediate help to the needy and offered to transfer packages and contributions directly to the survivors and their families in Poland. The West German public has been particularly responsive to appeals from many organizations to send food parcels and clothing to Poland.

WASHINGTON — Two Congressmen who have just returned from a week's visit to the Soviet Union said that Jews and others who want to emigrate from the Soviet Union believe they are being held "hostage" for future deals with the United States.

NEW YORK — Leaders of Reform and Conservative Judaism in America hailed the Israeli Supreme Court's challenge to the Orthodox rabbinic's exclusive right to officiate at marriages in Israel and expressed confidence over the weekend that the court's action will result in the extension of equal rights to all branches of Judaism in the Jewish State.

TEL AVIV — Members of Anatoly Shcharansky's family were allowed to see the Jewish Prisoner of Conscience last week for the first time in 18 months, his brother Leonid told Anatoly's wife Avital by phone from Moscow. ## This UJA... What's in it for you!

by Jack Krane

General Chairman, 1982 Campaign

During my two years as Deputy Chairman I was introduced to a new form of terminology... We are One... Operation Upgrade... Cash Poor... Broadening the Base. I also had the opportunity to observe the patterns and trends of the times and their effect on our people's method of commitments; the high interest rates adding to the problems of inflation were factors and everyone was deeply concerned because our local needs had to be met and our commitment to Israel was unquestionable.

In our quest for solutions, one of the subjects Lorry Greenberg used to touch on was the term "Shareholders". I became instantly intrigued with Lorry's observations. Lorry would insist that we meet at least once a year with Shareholders of our community...keep them informed of our needs...let them know about the potential cutbacks in our services...outline all new applications for funds and provide a complete up-date on Israel.

I must admit that I was a pretty naive deputy chairman. The questions I rattled off were "What do you mean by Shareholders Lorry?" "Who are the Shareholders Lorry?"

"Jake, we are all shareholders in the community... everyone who makes a contribution of time in our community is a shareholder... a financial commitment and you are a shareholder... and the high quality of our total participation is what makes Ottawa, per capita, one of the leading cities in North America in terms of social services and education."

"There is, however, a group of old established Ottawa families who have traditionally through the years supported a good portion of the needs of our community. Whenever a fund raising drive for a Shul or our Community Centre or even for the support of a single family became necessary, a meeting of the old shareholders was the order of the day. And if there was a general agreement that the cause was justified, you could be assured of a successful endeavour."

"But in the last few years the ranks of these families began to thin. Some of them have passed away, others have moved and there are those who are just getting older and have no conception of the impact made by inflation. Some feel they have carried the burden of responsibility long enough and would like to see the younger people assume more of the load. In the end Jake, I have always felt that a better informed Jew, a more knowledgeable Jew becomes a more committed Jew and that is why I am most anxious to hold these meetings."

Lorry made a lot of sense to me and the more I thought about his idea, the more I agreed with his conception and vision. Strange though, I felt that as Jews, our responsibilities remained with us until the day we died. All of us share some kind of duties to help keep our community... Ottawa... in a fashion that Ottawa Jews deserve and to which they are entitled.

I began to compare the term "Shareholders" with parenthood. I felt as I grew older that my responsibility as a Father to my children would diminish; but I have found that only the priorities change. It seems that regardless of your children's progress and maturity, they still have a need for their parents, not so much for our guidance but for our support and approval.

To me, the "Shareholders" have to continue to lend their support to our community's needs and the needs of Israel. They are the Fathers of this community... they have earned the respect of the community... they are constantly honored in their Synagogues during the High Holidays... they are wise and knowledgeable. We expect their input and their participation.

In this time of great need both here and abroad, please don't let us down! Don't throw up your arms and say that we have done our share and let some of the younger "punks" fill our shoes. We're trying, we're trying, but the shoes are hard to fill. The price that you have to pay for being a Jew is that you can really never let up... you can never have done enough... it is in your heritage to continue to support all of the needs all of the time.

We need the Shareholders... We want the Shareholders FULL TIME!

I hereby call a meeting of the Shareholders of Ottawa... you know who you are and you know the purpose of the meeting... I will meet with you on a one-to-one basis or collectively and for just one purpose...

To continue to make Ottawa one of the finest cities to raise our grandchildren in and to help our Brothers and Sisters in Israel.

Commentary

by Cynthia Engel
Editor

Remember the photographs and films that flooded the circuit just after Israel came into being? They certainly looked happy, those early pioneers bent on building a dream. Life in Israel appeared to be like life at summer camp twelve months of the year.

By day it seemed the entire population to a man — and a woman — clad in khaki shorts, sporting nifty little hats to protect them from the sun, a shovel slung jauntily over one shoulder — smiled, smiled its way to daily labours, whistling the Hebrew adaptation of the Seven Dwarfs' Merry "Hie ho, hie ho, it's off to work we go!"

And by night, after a bearty meal shared with good friends in the kibbutz dining room, chameleon-like they changed into singing, clapping hora dancers (garbed-vooden-in native dress) and revelled into the wee small hours of the morning until, exhausted and exhilarated, they fell into bed to catch forty winks before the dawn's early light when the workday began again.

Reel life showed the Israelis eternally happy as they marched off to work, as they tilled the soil, even as they scattered feed to that basic ingredient of Jewish soul food — the chickens.

Those were hard but happy times. And while nary a visitor to Israel has ever returned home with wondrous tales of hora dancing in the streets, all who go there readily see the fruits of those first joyous labours.

For out of sand the Israelis built a country. With their hearts and souls and all their energies.

From out of nothing came the towns and cities. And the roads that connect them.

From out of nowhere came offices to house businesses. And apartments to house refugees.

And they tended the land and they grew their own food. And life, at last, was good.

From the very first day that Israel truly was, Israelis were busy planting precious trees and nurturing them in the swamplands, and in sandy wastes, and on the rocky hillsides. And with each tree they planted, they planted a dream — a dream of a land of fertile valleys, of green mountains, of productive deserts.

And that land has come to be.

Traditionally on Tu B'Shvat the Jewish National Fund, which this year celebrates eighty years' involvement in the vital afforestation of Israel (an involvement dating back to the days when Israel was still called Palestine) — holds its annual Plant-a-Tree Telethon. And on Tu B'Shvat the Israelis — now a cosmopolitan people — throw off their sophistication and take to the hills clad in khaki shorts and sunhats, with a shovel thrown jauntily over one shoulder. And sing. And dance the hora. And plant trees. And with each tree, a dream.

A great deal has already been accomplished in Israel, but there is still much to be done. Sadly, we cannot share in the joy of the planting, but happily we can supply the trees, and in that way share in making the dream a reality. Forever.

Study: Jewish Mongolians

One of the most intriguing archaeological puzzles to have emerged in recent years — discovery of the medieval "Jewish" Mongolian population of the Celarevo region of Yugoslavia — was the subject of an international symposium held in Belgrade, the World Jewish Congress reports.

Organized by the Jewish Museum in Belgrade and the City Museum of Novi Sad in Yugoslavia, the symposium brought together scholars and experts from across Europe to consider and assess the accumulated body of information developed since the time that word of the Celarevo find was initially disclosed. Archaeological excavations some eight years ago unearthed more than 250 graves at a brickyard in Celarevo, as well as fragments of Roman bricks with a menorah, Hebrew lettering and Jewish symbols inscribed on them.

Many participants in the symposium put forward the theory that the population under study was probably of Khazar origin. The Khazars, a national group of general Turkic type, commanded a sovereign empire in Eastern Europe between the seventh and tenth centuries. History records that the leading Khazars of the period professed Judaism.

Book Review

The Impossible Promised Land, Poems New and Selected By Seymour Mayne, Mosaic Press/Valley Editions, Cloth, $14.95, Paper, $7.95.

Burnt Pearls, Ghetto Poems, By Abraham Sutzkever, Translations from the Yiddish by Seymour Mayne, Introduction by Ruth Wisse, Drawing of the poet by Sharon Katz, Cloth, $11.95, Paper, $7.95.

Reviewed by Sharon Drache

It is fitting that these two publications by Seymour Mayne, his selected poems from 1961-1981 and his translations of the Israeli poet, Abraham Sutzkever, appear simultaneously. For Mayne not only translated Sutzkever's poetry, he received inspiration from this Polish partisan fighter who survived World War II and wrote some of his finest poems during his incarceration in the Vilna ghetto (1941-1943).

"The muse for Sutzkever ('muz' in Yiddish) was no decorative enhancement, but the primitive life-urge, the cry of an almost extinguished self, demanding recognition," says Ruth Wisse in her introduction to Burnt Pearls.

Perhaps the poem which best describes Wisse's statement is "Poem about a Herring." Here, starvation, a bleak reality, becomes art as a mother reaches into her satchel to give her screaming child a herring before he is shot and hurled into an open lime pit. The concluding lines read:

"Frozen and grotesque/this picture holds like a frieze/a child with a bloody herring in his mouth/on a certain summer's morning/And I search for that herring's salt/and still can not/find its taste on my lips."

Like Sutzkever, Mayne steps with the past, obsessively naming experiences he can't understand. But Mayne is lucky. He was born in Montreal in 1944 with the blessing of being spared the cruel realities of World War II. Yet, he has travelled widely, physically and spiritually, "to taste the herring's salt on his lips."

In his quest, he has named Israel, "The Impossible Promised Land." In fact, this title for his selected poems occurs in a tribute he wrote to Sutzkever. "Hurrying you seem/always rushing and writing/poems as all poets now do/in haste, secretly/unseen in no man's land, invisible place, the impossible promised land/where all refugee words/are gathered and make shelter." The metaphor of the land, Mayne's Yiddish "muz", defines his commitment as Diaspora poet receiving inspiration from his beloved Zion.

In the late A.M. Klein's poetic richness, Mayne also finds inspiration. Here are a few lines from his tribute to Klein in this present collection: "So you made the N.Y. Times/with your death-a column/mimic of your poetic mime/the richness of your vision/and rising behind Montreal's gothic/french and english, Yerushalayim ..../Your city/rose to the north, and green/like Safed the hills lay at your feet/to be sung into the carpets upon which Adam first tripped." This tribute represented Mayne in The Spice-Box (anthology of Canadian Jewish writing recently published by Lester and Orpen).

Seymour Mayne

There is little doubt that Mayne has proved his ability to weave his Jewishness with his creative obsessions. His best poems are invariably his Jewish ones. Let this poem, "Devotional" speak for itself: "I stand before the snow/-January's talit/beret of blue stripes/the morning tassels of icicles gnarl into view/tefillin chimney tops/hold to the foreheads of homes/the wind, cantorial/utters benedictions/urging the housed congregations/who either curse or sing/Spring will be the Passover of G-d."

For me, the two finest contributions in The Impossible Promised Land are "City of the Hidden", and "The Arava: To the Sinai." (Both previously published in Diasporas, Mosaic, 1977). These poems speak to Jerusalem, the longing for the land as integral to the Jewish promise.

Seymour Mayne resides in Ottawa where he is currently teaching in the department of English at the University of Ottawa. He is author of ten collections of poetry, including Name (Mosaic, 1975) which won the J.I. Segal Award in English-French literature. He has also edited critical texts and anthologies including The A.M. Klein Symposium, 1975 and Irving Layton: The poet and his Critics, 1978.

We are fortunate to have Seymour Mayne in our community. He is available for readings and lectures and may be reached through the department of English at Ottawa University.

The Moral Majority? by Rabbi Reuven P. Bulka Congregation Machzikei Hadas

For every action, there is an equal and opposite reaction. That law is not merely a rule of physics. It often applies in the realm of individual and collective human behavior.

Thus, the move to the right in American politics is the almost predictable swing to counterbalance the liberal, left-of-centre trend which characterized the 1960s and 1970s.

Religiously, the move to the right is manifested in the phenomenon of the so-called Moral Majority.

There are those who would condemn the Moral Majority movement for using its clout to project specific opinions or lobby for certain laws. But that, at once, is unfair and misses the point.

Why should any group feel constrained about espousing its views? This, after all, is the key element in democracy; freely expressing views and attempting to influence the lawmakers. In the abortion issue, for example, politicians were wary of expressing an anti-abortion stance for fear of incurring feminist wrath. Now, if they project a pro-abortion stance, they are sure to provoke the anger of the Moral Majority.

The reality that with either stand politicians will lose a significant voting bloc is a healthy development. Now, perhaps, instead of voting out of fear, they can express themselves on the issue itself and finally confront this most crucial moral dilemma purely on its ethical, moral and human merits.

The point about the Moral Majority which needs to be confronted is the cause they purport to represent — in the narrow sense, Christian fundamentalism. In a wider sense, religion. And ultimately, God.

Regarding the narrow sense, the imposition of a specific brand of religion onto society not only compromises individual freedom; it also places those of differing persuasions in the discomfiting position of having to conform. It is a form of back-door crusade achieved through political wordmanship.

In a wider sense, the Moral Majority represents religion, or so we are led to believe. Here one must confront the crucial question: Is religion moral? The verdict of history leans heavily to the negative. Religion has given us hatred, bigotry, pogroms, crusades and wholesale murder in the name of God. The very religion which today jumps to the fore as a moral force has still not purged the doctrine of hatred and rejection from its very theology. Secular humanism, to be frank, is more moral.

Parenthetically, although Judaism usually gets lumped together with the other religions of the world, as one of the so-called "big three", it is not a religion on par with its supposed counterparts. Judaism is more a lifestyle, an enveloping way of life based on faith in God.

Whilst there may be times when those who purport to represent Judaism exhibit less than ideal behaviour, in the main Judaism has not gone on crusades for God or vilified other faith systems. Judaism has its chauvinists, but these chauvinists do not kill wholesale in the name of God.

Additionally, the type of value inherent in the political theology foisted on the public by the Moral Majority tends to denial, austerity, severity, even melancholy. This is totally inconsistent not only with the societal flow, but also with the fact that humans are more profoundly inclined to life, even to God, in an optimistic, affirmative, joyous, pleasure-appreciative framework.

Finally, in the ultimate sense, the Moral Majority supposedly represents God, the ultimate source of its value posture. But is God so impotent as to be in need of soldiers to fight holy wars? The very need to impose an idea is evidence of its emptiness — otherwise it would be readily accepted by the interested public. If the idea of God and Godly value is strong enough, it will eventually take hold, not via coercion, but through choice.

The Moral Majority not only distorts democracy, it distorts religion and ultimately is a perversion of the Godly ideal. Let the members of the Moral Majority lead by quiet example. If their values and morals are attractive, the public will take heed. If not, their values and morals will be relegated to where they belong, in the scrap-heap of ideological rubbish which makes no contribution to human betterment.

JNF Telethon Kosher Corner Sun., Feb. 7

At Tu B'Shvat — the New Year of the Trees — Israelis traditionally celebrate by planting trees with their own hands.

Ottawa residents can participate in this tradition by buying trees on Sunday, February 7 during the Annual Jewish National Fund Telethon. "Strong support from the Ottawa Jewish Community is vital to the success of this Telethon" emphasized Chairman Shelley Schachnow.

Since its creation 20 years ago, the JNF has planted more than 140 million trees to revitalize the land of Israel. It has also drained the swamps of the Galilee and is making the Negev bloom through the establishment settlements.

The Ottawa Office of the JNF has recently reopened. Anyone who is missed on Telethon Sunday can plant trees by calling the JNF at 820-3835, Monday through Friday between 9:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m.

EGGED the huge transport co-operative which has over 5,000 buses and tour coaches plans to commence a direct coach service between Tel Aviv and Cairo.

EL AL President Yitzhak Shander announced in Tel Aviv that effective April 5 thru October 31, 1982 a once weekly series of charter flights would be operated by the carrier from Los Angeles to Tel Aviv.

Hyatt will manage a new 600 room hotel to be constructed in Jerusalem at a cost of some $50 million. The hotel, planned for completion by late 1983 will be second in size to the Tel Aviv Hilton (620 rooms).

Success of the recently held Rose Pilgrimage at the Jerusalem Hilton when over 500 overseas rosegrowers and rose lovers came has initiated demand for similar events to be held in the city. Conventions (Kopel Tours) Ltd. arranged the Congress.

Haifa is expanding its facilities to meet growing demand for international congresses and conventions in the city. Already able to accommodate over 1,500 persons in the Auditorium plans are in hand to add hall to take another 1,000 persons.

Emerald buyers and dealers from all over the world may convene in Tel Aviv in 1983 for first-time convention of this kind held in Israel. Second only to diamonds which in Israel is a $1 billion a year business, emeralds produced in Israel account for half the world total production.

Motels may be introduced to Israel for the first time. The millionaire Canadian Reichman brothers announced in Tel Aviv that they had taken up an option to construct a series of motels adjacent to main towns under licence from Holiday Inns.

Dairy Products and the Cheese Co-ops

In response to frequent requests for a review of kosher dairy products on the market, the Ottawa Vaad Hakashruth is providing the following summary. (A survey of kosher ice cream products appeared in the January 8 issue of the Bulletin).

Two points should be borne in mind in purchasing dairy products. First, several food manufacturers such as Dominion Dairies Limited (Sealtest) produce a variety of cheese and cream products that are both kosher and non-kosher. The kashruth seal of the COR or MK is the consumer's guide to product differentiation.

Second, there are few dairy products on the market in Ottawa that are "cholo Yisroel" or made from dairy products supplied by Jewish agricultural producers. For those who are "machmir" (strict) in this regard, the Guaranteed Milk Company of Montreal produces milk, cottage cheese and sour cream of this type.

The following are the major dairy products manufactured under rabbinical supervision: Dominion Dairies Limited Sealtest Dry Cottage Cheese, Sealtest Egg Nog, Sealtest Creamed Cottage Cheese, Sealtest Light 'n' Lively Cottage Cheese, Lively Cottage Cheese, Sealtest Pineapple Cottage Cheese, Sealtest Celery Pepper Cottage Cheese, Sealtest Sour Cream, Sealtest Sour Cream Onion Dip, Sealtest Milk and Buttermilk.

Consumer Co-ops

Two kosher consumer cheese co-ops have been operating in Ottawa in the last few years: The Alta Vista Kosher Cheese Co-op (contact Elaina Keen at 523-2633) and the West-End Kosher Cheese Co-op (contact Shirley Steinberg at 729-5283) will take your orders for Liberty Brand cheeses. There are no membership entry fees and prices are at the wholesale level for hard cheeses and are quite competitive for other products. Orders must be picked up in person at the homes of the above Co-op coordinators and paid in cash.

The Co-ops place orders for their members on a monthly basis with each member rotating in this task. When ordering cheese in bulk (Cheddar or Farmer's), only orders for half or full blocks will be taken.

What has it been like to be a UJA collector for many years...

Satisfying, rewarding, occasionally disappointing.

I've been lucky. Most people are a pleasure to deal with. Some even wait for my call each year. Only the odd one gives me a hard time or won't contribute at all.

As a U.J.A. canvasser, I feel I am doing something for my community and for Israel. We have to stick together or we're lost.

As long as God spares me, I'll continue to do my share.

It's a privilege to be a member of the Ottawa Jewish Community.

Cults believed destructive

By Shari Schwartz
"Destructive" cults are on the rise in Canada and are dangerous threats to the basic structures in our society, says Mike Kropveld, director of the B'nai B'rith/Hillel's cult prevention project in Montreal.

I spoke with Kropveld last month when he visited Carleton University. We discussed the cult phenomenon and the issues of deceptive recruitment, mind control and certain illegal activities of several organizations. He also recounted his own experiences with the Unification Church (Moonies) and the story of his friend, Benji Carroll, upon which the current Canadian film "Ticket to Heaven" is based.

"People in society today see these new, bizarre groups and right away they consider them a cult," said Kropveld. In order to clarify the groups he focuses on in his work, he uses the term "destructive." He says a destructive cult uses deception in fund-raising and recruitment techniques.

The group also usually has a living leader who claims he is a messiah or a prophet and is generally quite wealthy, living in exquisite surroundings while the members live in spartan conditions. The members are totally obedient to the leader and work hard to turn over money and resources to the movement.

"Destructive" cults believe they have a monopoly on all truth and goodness, said

Kropveld, and have a doctrine of "the end justifies the means." They claim that because they are working for God and trying to create the perfect society, any way they can achieve that goal is legitimized and rationalized within the movement.

"What is in question is not the religious beliefs of these organizations," he stressed, "but the actions and deceptive practices which are being carried out on society, on individuals who are being recruited into these movements."

Kropveld said given the right circumstances, anyone is vulnerable to a cult's recruiting techniques. "It's not an intellectual appeal, it's an emotional one... an emotional getting hold of a person, appealing to his needs. If you happen to be going through a down period just before exams, for example, this kind of emotional group support can be pretty appealing."

Kropveld described the many cults that are active in Canada and the United States. He talked at lengths about Rev. Sun Myung Moon and his Unification Church.

This group has had much media coverage lately because Rev. Moon was up for indictment for tax evasion in the U.S. and is being investigated for other activities, such as an attempt to raise funds illegally on a wide scale.

Kropveld said the Unification Church operates under 150 front names. He himself entered what he thought was the "Creative Community Project" and didn't know he was in the "Moonies" until he got out of the group three weeks later.

The Unification Church operated at Carleton University under the name "Religion Association for the Research of Principles" a few years ago. They are no longer at Carleton but still operate at the University of Toronto and many university campuses in the United States.

Kropveld talked about the Church of Scientology and its founder, former science-fiction writer L. Ron Hubbard, who was quoted as saying at a science-fiction convention in 1954: "Why write science-fiction for a penny a word when you can start your own religion and make a million?" Hubbard's most recent publication, "Dianetics", is currently being advertised in Ottawa on an AM radio station.

There are also questionable activities associated with groups such as "The Family of Love" and their leader, David Moses Berg, the "Divine Light Mission", the Hare Krishna movement, "The Way International", and the Church Universal and Triumphant.

"People today have no sense of community, no established roots. They find themselves alone a lot and are constantly searching on a subconscious level. Cults are just a sign of the times."

Morton Baslaw-Portrait of an Artist

les Quebecois Antiquities...accepted for the 109th Annual Ontario Society of Artists Exhibition.

By Cynthia Engel

To Ottawa landscape artist Morton Baslaw, "the most strenuous judgment of a person's worth, especially in art, is the recognition extended to him by his peers."

Baslaw, 57, obviously measures up. In 1970 he was invited to join the coveted Canadian Society of Painters in Water Colour, whose limited membership — by invitation only — presently numbers, across Canada, approximately 94 chosen artists.

In 1974 Baslaw was again honoured with an acceptance into one of the oldest and most prestigious art societies in Canada, the 109-year old Ontario Society of Artists, a group of about 135 artists working in all media.

As further evidence of his considerable talent, Baslaw has enjoyed another — albeit dismaying — distinction: on more than one occasion his landscapes, while on exhibition, have been stolen from the shows!

A recognized landscape painter in watercolour who fashions his paintings with a technique of interpretive realism, Baslaw was practically "born with a paintbrush in his hand". At age four he was drawing discernible aircraft, complete with individual markings.

However, it wasn't until his discharge from the Air Force that his creativity was channelled through formal training. At the urging of an R.C.A.F. career counsellor, he enrolled in the Chicago Academy of Fine Art.

There he studied under The American Water Color Society's Ruth Van Sickle Ford, his mentor. "Today she would be about 80 years old," he says with fondness, "and takes great pride in what her students have accomplished."

Baslaw admits to three great loves: his family, his painting and his trailer. This latter, the "Baslaw house-on-wheels", he credits with allowing him — literally and figuratively — to simultaneously enjoy the other two.

"Usually", he says smiling, "my generosity at including the family was really at (wife) Sheila's expense as the babysitter."

Over the years the Baslows and their three children, now grown, have logged more than 100,000 miles criss-crossing Canada as well as most of the mid and western United States on numerous painting expeditions.

Baslaw feels these excursions have given the children a real feeling of the vastness and immensity of this country.

The choosing of a suitable site to paint frequently involves participation by the whole family. In fact, the siting of his recent work "Quebecois Antiquities", currently chosen for exhibit by The Ontario Society of Artists 109th Juried Exhibition, was discovered by Sheila.

Once the ritual of receiving permission to paint is granted (he has never had a refusal), Baslaw notes, "the route is usually one of suspicion". To allay any fears and to satisfy the curious, he makes certain to provide "a spare little stool" for the interested onlooker to watch his painting evolve.

"This has made for the development of a great many lasting relationships with nice people who come in contact with me while I paint," he says.

Baslaw does not sketch nor does he paint from any of the more than 4,000 photographs taken on his trips because, "I get no emotional highs that way. I need the feel of the cold, the heat, the rain. I need to feel the elements around me."

He finishes his work on location even if it means, as it has in some instances, returning to the site again and again over a period of years.

While a great deal of his time has been spent painting landscapes, (a 'Baslaw' can command up to $5,000), Morton Baslaw has spent much of his life involved in the world of commercial art. He sees no conflict between the two and moves easily in both spheres as he considers all types of art forms of communication.

His water colours have been widely exhibited throughout Canada and he is represented in private collections in Canada, the United States, Israel, Germany and Kenya.

A Founding Past President of the Ottawa Society of Painters in Water Colour and Past President and Director of the Ottawa School of Art, Baslaw lectures, judges and teaches at the Ottawa School of Art and Algonquin College.

Recently three of his works were accepted for exhibition: "Quebecois Antiquities" was chosen for inclusion in the Ontario Society of Artists' 109th Juried Exhibition currently at the MacDonald Gallery in Toronto; "Spring Breakup on the Rideau at the Hurdman", and "Encroachment of a City on a Countryside" were accepted for the Canadian Society of Painters in Water Colour 56th Annual Exhibition which opened in Sarnia in January and is slated to travel to St. Thomas and Cambridge.

Morton Baslaw is married to the former Sheila Saslove, a social worker presently employed as Court Conciliator with the Provincial Attorney's office. The couple has three sons, David, 21, a student at Trent University; Lawrence, 20, who is studying at Queen's University, and Coleman, 18, currently completing Grade 13 at Ridgmont High School.

Israeli psychologist featured at seminar

By Vivian Astroff

Dr. Reuven Feuerstein is an internationally known psychologist, educator, and pioneer in the field of remedial education. His techniques for assessing and teaching retarded children and functionally illiterate adults are already being applied in Europe, North and South America, and for more than a decade, have been in use throughout Israel.

He is director of the Hadassah-WIZO Canada Research Institute of Jerusalem, a director of Psychological Services at Youth Aliyah, and a professor of psychology at Bar Ilan University.

Recently, Dr. Feuerstein was the focus of a professional seminar held simultaneously with the Canadian Hadassah-WIZO National Convention in Ottawa in November.

Co-sponsored by Canadian Hadassah-WIZO and the Correctional Service of Canada, the day-long seminar attracted some 130 educators, psychologists, school board and hospital representatives from across Canada.

A former student of the late Swiss psychologist Jean Piaget, Dr. Feuerstein discarded traditional theories that intelligence is the unfolding of an inborn ability. Working in Israel with the influx of "Youth Aliyah" children who survived the Holocaust, Dr. Feuerstein concentrated on slow learners and stimulated them to improve their thinking skills through a method he calls "instrumental enrichment".

It was this method that made Dr. Feuerstein a maverick in educating the "uneducable." Sandy Ages, an Ottawa psychological consultant and co-chairperson of the seminar, says the method calls for a special kind of teacher because of the close rapport required with pupils.

"Motivation is a key factor as well," says Mrs. Ages, "kids really become highly motivated because for the first time they're meeting success where they just haven't before."

Seminar speakers included experts in the field of special education. Dr. Carl Haywood, professor of psychology and neurology, Vanderbilt University, spoke on "Cognitive Education Research in North America." Dr. Haywood is also director of the John F. Kennedy Center for Research on Education and Human Development, and president of U.S. National Mental Health Retardation Centers.

Dr. Harry Silverman of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (Toronto) gave an overview of the use of Dr. Feuerstein's teaching techniques in Ontario schools.

Dr. Mary Waksman of the Faculty of Education, University of Toronto, spoke on the use of instrumental enrichment in Canada's penitentiary schools. When tried on a pilot basis, the Feuerstein method met with prisoners' enthusiasm, and a new program for functionally illiterate inmates will begin in the New Year.

Special guest speaker was

Dr. Luis Alberto Machado, Venezuelan Minister for the Development of Human Intelligence. Dr. Machado told of his government's philosophy that every child has the right to have his mental ability developed to its fullest potential. For this reason, the government established a special ministry for the development of intelligence, perhaps the only one of its kind in the world. In Venezuela, Dr. Feuerstein's theories and methods are required study by all college students in teacher-training programs.

The seminar was coordinated and co-chaired by Sandy Ages, Roslyn Kimmel, guidance counsellor and educator, and Dr. Douglas Griffin, Chief, Academic Education, the Correctional Service of Canada.

MULTI ARMS SECURITY

When you leave... we stay on guard.

Dear Fellow Members of the Jewish Community,

On November 28, 1981, the "Ottawa Citizen" reported:

Some days as many as 40 Ottawa homes are broken into. Brian Skinner, head of Ottawa's crime prevention unit says, "There's still an attitude that 'it'll never happen to me.' As long as people adopt that attitude, sooner or later it will happen to them."

"We were just too trusting," says Legault, a resident of Nepean's Parkwood Hills. It had never happened in my neighborhood and I've been here for 15 years. Once you've experienced it, it'll stay with you for a long time."

We are proud to represent in Canada the finest examples of ISRAELI security technology — High Security hardware for all your doors and windows, electronic burglar-fire-medical alarm systems (complete with full monitoring capability), and the most advanced vehicle alarm system the world has ever seen.

We will be pleased to provide you with a thorough security consultation, at no obligation whatsoever, to discuss your security needs and how they may be best fulfilled.

Take preventative action!

Yours truly,
Offir Asher

What does Ottawa's Hillel Lodge mean to me....

I've been a resident of Hillel Lodge for almost two years. I came in because I wasn't well and could not live alone. I am content and have no regrets.

Here, I am a mensch. I have people around me and I get the attention I need. I feel cared for and protected in a Jewish atmosphere.

And yet, I have the privacy I need to enjoy my reading and to look after my own affairs.

Thank you Hillel Lodge... and thank you U.J.A. for giving new meaning to my life.

Notes for Seniors

By Marlene Cherun, M.S.W.
Jewish Social Services Agency of Ottawa-Carleton

Do you have problems with prescription drugs or over the counter drugs or with alcohol? Do you find that you have become dependent on tranquilizers or sleeping pills, or that the combination of your drugs makes you dizzy or confused?

These problems are not unusual for an older person but they are frightening. They place you in danger of falling, too, particularly at night in your home. If you live alone the risks are, of course, greater. If you ever experience such difficulties, please discuss them with your doctor as soon as possible.

There is also a resource provided by the City of Ottawa. The City runs a program called "Lifestyle Enrichment for Senior Adults" — LESA. Trained counsellors help seniors through group or private sessions to use community resources appropriately, to learn to relax, to plan a healthy diet, to increase physical activity and to deal with problems. If you think LESA has something to offer you, contact the Centretown Community Resource Centre at 100 Argyle Avenue, or call 563-4771.

Remember that each Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. the Senior Adult Drop-in Centre is open for your use. Come for coffee and for the Current Events Discussion Group led by Hugo Levendal. Everyone is welcome. Come and make it your place.

WHAT HAPPENS TO A DREAM WHEN A DREAM COMES TRUE?

Peace with Egypt was a dream.
Longed for through five bitter wars.

The dream came true. Peace with Egypt is a fact.

What happened to the dream?

It lives on. In the self-sacrifice of Sinai settlers who have to leave the fields and orchards they created out of a desert. Only to move to a new desert, the Negev. To start all over again.

Will their sacrifice have meaning?
Will they get what they need to help them? The housing? The seeds, the trees, the water? Will they be able to pioneer the new population centres, ending the emptiness of the Negev?

Yes, they will. If we will it. If we do our share through our U.J.A.

Campaign, to help them pay the price of peace.

What happens to a Jewish dream when it comes true, It lives on, in the Jewish heart.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin, Ruth Soloway, Maurice Wright and Fern Cohen were among the patrons at the dinner held in the Salon of the NAC to launch the Endowment Fund for the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra.

Endowment Fund launched at dinner

By Cynthia Engel

A justifiable sense of pride was evident as the select group gathered for dinner in the Salon of the National Arts Centre on Monday, January 18. There was a feeling that something terribly important was happening here, and those assembled to share in it mirrored the excitement.

In conjunction with its 1982 North American tour, the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, with the help of its friends around the world, is establishing an Endowment Fund, the income from which will provide continuing support for the Orchestra.

The Canada-Israel Cultural Foundation has identified a Canadian project within the Fund in the form of "endowing" the Concertmaster's Chair. Funds are being solicited in Ottawa, Toronto, Montreal and elsewhere in Canada.

Appropriately, the occasion of Isaac Stern's concert was chosen to launch the first phase of that commitment at a dinner in the Salon of the NAC hosted by the former Governor of the Bank of Canada, Louis Rasminsky, and the Ottawa branch of the Canada-Israel Cultural Foundation. Longtime supporters of the arts in Canada and Israel and friends of Mr. Rasminsky were in attendance.

In addition there were a number of special guests whose presence added an extra dimension to the lustre of the evening.

In his welcoming remarks, Louis Rasminsky traced the origins of the IPO back 45 years to the Hitler era when so many talented musicians left Germany for Israel (then Palestine.)

"There a violinist — a middle European named Huberman — gathered a group together to form the Palestine Symphony Orchestra who were good enough to have, as their first conductor, Toscaninni," Mr. Rasminsky said. "They have never looked back," he added.

"However," he noted, "while they play innumerable concerts in Israel and seem to be largely self-sustained at the box office there, trips, abroad are expensive. Hence the establishment of this Endowment Fund."

The Canadian Concermaster's Chair will guarantee in perpetuity the salary of the Concertmaster of the IPO.

Joan Comay, wife of the first Israeli Ambassador to Canada, 'reminiscing on Israel's cultural vitality as early as the founding of the State, recalled February 1949 when Israel had just taken Beersheba — then a one-street Arab town — and Leonard Bernstein had come to Israel to conduct the Orchestra.

"Lenny looked at the situation and said 'I am taking the Orchestra to Beersheba,'" she recalled.

Performers and instruments were loaded onto three open trucks and driven over dirt roads to Beersheba where, "they performed from the backs of those trucks with the sound of guns booming in the background," Mrs. Comay said. "The wounded who could be moved were brought closer so they too could hear."

"Lenny himself," Mrs. Comay continued, "played an old piano they had found somewhere, and when one of the legs of the piano stool gave way under him, a young Israeli soldier crawled up and fixed it with a pile of broken stones and the concert went on."

"It was," she said, "quite mad, but the Israelis did not consider it mad at all."

During the intermission of the Stern concert, dinner guests returned to The Salon where they were joined by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. Later that evening the Prime Minister and Isaac Stern, who are old friends, were guests at a post-performance dinner hosted by NAC Director-General Donald MacSween.

Evelyn Greenberg, one of the organizers of the IPO festivities, is extremely gratified by the interest shown in support of Israel's Orchestra.

"It looks as though people realize that the Israel Philharmonic is Israel's second most important export, next to Jaffa oranges," she said.

The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Zubin Mehta, will appear in one performance only at the NAC on Sunday, May 30. The soloist on this occasion will be Israeli violinist Shlomo Mintz. The CICF will continue its campaign for the Israel Philharmonic Endowment Fund at that time.

Italian attitudes to anti-semitism

The World Jewish Congress reports on the findings of research undertaken by local Jewish institutions in Italy which indicate the persistence of antisemitic stereotypes in wide strata of the Italian population.

Most revealing were a series of short interviews carried by the Rome community's monthly journal Shalom under the title, "The Geography of Prejudice".

The first in the series was conducted by a young anthropologist at the University of Arezzo (Tuscany) in the townships and villages of the nearby Casentino Valley. The Church archives in the area include many records of trials against Jews in the Middle Ages and even later. The question asked was, "How do you picture a Jew?" The answers contained fantasy, folktales, stereotypes based on hearsay and legends, and a general mistrust of Jews. Tales of bleeding wafers and stolen bleeding coins as well as ancient maledictions were related by students, clerks and peasant women as though they had happened yesterday.

Although there was much repetition of the classic stereotypes (Jews gained riches as usurers, killed Christ, etc...) the interviewers were impressed by the absence of malevolence with which these "facts" were related. A former teacher explained that, while there was no racism in the Valley, there remains a traditional negative attitude toward Jews, much of it motivated by economic factors. But he pointed out that during the war, with many Jews in the area forced to hide, there was not a single case of betrayal.

The poll was next conducted in Milan and Rome. The replies, again, showed no hatred or even strong dislike though there was clear prejudice — all (in the words of one investigator) expressed with great civility. Perhaps the most remarkable reply came from a young traffic policeman who described Jews as "persons who need a lot of affection and understanding from others."

According to the WJC, the experts of the Documentation Centre have concluded that these interviews point up basic ignorance and confusion much more than hatred and racism. These are seen to present difficult but not insurmountable obstacles. An independent finding of the Center indicates a rise in antisemitic episodes of Fascist or Neo-Nazi origin while their analysis indicates that Church and religious-inspired incidents have greatly decreased.

Executive Committee, National Capital Council of Jewish Youth

As I see it...

By Ian Borer

It has been a year and half since I made the move Northeast from Toronto to Ottawa. I believe that this is sufficient time for me to share some of my observations on the teen program in this city. For purposes of organization this will be done using the following three main categories — co-operation, services and a general commentary.

Co-operation: A spirit of co-operation exists in Ottawa like I have not seen in any other city. I use as my source of comparison the cities I have lived in, namely Montreal, Toronto and Edmonton. In those cities it was virtually impossible to gather representatives from youth groups to co-ordinate and organize events.

In the Spring of 1980 the National Capital Council of Jewish Youth was formed as a sounding board and focal point of teen activities (See Purpose of Council). This body, created from the Teen Summit held in April 1980 has been active in organizing many teen activities. Representatives from all city youth groups work hard and with great commitments to organize and execute programs. They come together and in a way of fantastic spirit and co-operation work together to understand and accept each other.

Services: Outlined elsewhere in this section is a listing of youth groups available for teens and some information about their aims and objectives. These will not be gone into here but suffice to say that all are run in a very professional manner by key youth and adult leaders. Each youth group represents a different range of philosophies and activities and each teenager in the city should be able to find something for him/herself within the structure.

Added to these youth groups, the Jewish Community Centre offers programs to supplement efforts of the youth groups. The Centre does not believe in competing for the market, but to work with the groups and to offer programs for the entire community. Often times these fall into the categories of sports activities, recreational events, special hobby groups and the like.

General Commentary: From reading these pages on youth activities one might get the impression that things are great in the teen department. The truth is that I believe things are good. The structure has been built up, the youth groups are eagerly awaiting membership, and the J.C.C. continues to offer a range of programs. However, there are problems that we must combat.

We talk about apathy as being prevalent among the teen community, the adult community and in fact the entire Jewish Community. Why do kids prefer to stay home and watch a Betamax machine? I am not sure. I do know that it is important for Jewish teens to interact with Jewish teens and function in a Jewish environment. We all know too well the consequences, and that is why the Centre and youth groups exist. Unfortunately out of the approximately 900 teens in the city only about 250 of them, at any given time, take part in any type of activity.

If any of the remaining 650 out there are reading this and/or their parents, the structure is there for you to join. Or, if you want something else, tell us. We are here to serve you and will offer you what you want. All you have to do is tell us. The truth of the matter is that, in the long run we all need each other.

NCCJY — the First Year

By Arnold Shinder

In the spring of 1980, the Jewish community leaders realized that there was poor youth leadership and organization in the Ottawa area.

In May of the same year, a teen summit was held to discuss the problems with respect to specific youth groups and their programming. One of the main proposals that came out of the summit was the need for a central body to help promote youth activities in the community.

The fall of 1980 began with the challenge of uniting the several extremely different youth groups, and forming a single body. Thus, the National Capital Council of Jewish Youth was formed.

In this council, we have representation from all B'nai B'rith youth groups, DROR, FROSTY, U.S.Y. AND N.C.S.Y. (The council also extends an open invitation to any unaffiliated youth who wishes to express their point of view concerning community matters.)

The goal of the Council is two-fold. Firstly, we wish to decrease the number of unaffiliated youth in the community. That is, those who don't belong to or attend a Jewish youth group. Secondly, we wish to promote all youth group activities as well as some special events programming.

Both the J.C.C. Board of Directors and the Ottawa Vaad Ha'ir have given N.C.C.J.Y. representation on their respective committees. This enables our Council to play an active role in the community as a whole and properly represent the city's youth.

After one complete year, we have seen excellent community programming. A social dance in the fall, community Chanukkah candle lighting, and the popular Purim carnival were some of the events that took place.

This year we are looking forward to bigger and better things. The only way these events will be equally successful is with the adult and teen support.

Many people work extremely hard so that the community can benefit from good programming. Let's see more youth come out to programs and spend more time with other Jewish teens.

Purpose of Council...

The Council will serve as the voice of Jewish teens in the designated area and, through representation on the Jewish Community Centre Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees of the Ottawa Vaad Ha'ir, will express the feelings, concerns and opinions of Jewish youth in Metropolitan Ottawa.

The role of the Council is to provide mass social and cultural programming for Jewish youth in the area designated as the National Capital Region; help co-ordinate youth group activity through development of a calendar of events on a yearly basis and other techniques and strategies as may be deemed appropriate by the Council; and to serve as a mechanism for promoting intergroup co-operation and promoting the sharing of information amongst groups for their mutual benefits and the benefit of the community.

Meet F.R.O.S.T.Y.

By Jon Hauptman, President

Our youth group is F.R.O.S.T.Y., the "Federation of Reform Ottawa Senior Temple Youth", is the youth group of Temple Israel. Our group belongs to a region called N.E.L.F.T.Y. — the North East Lakes Federation of Temple Youth.

We travel to at least a dozen cities that make up this region, as far away as Cleveland, Ohio and Erie, Pennsylvania, and to cities as close as Montreal and Toronto.

We also belong to N.F.T.Y., the North American Federation of Temple Youth.

F.R.O.S.T.Y. has about 40 members at the present time, with ages ranging from 14 to 18 years. We have been growing steadily each year since our conception about seven years ago. Under the guidance of our great advisors, Debbie and Gary Viner, we engage in a great range of programs.

We enjoy having social action, holding our own Youth Group Creative Services at Temple, conducting fund-raisers, as well as just having social fun events. Our programs are not always only for ourselves and very often we invite parents, congregants and other Jewish and non-Jewish Youth to participate.

In the future we hope to be the host of an all-Ottawa event, in which the Jewish Youth from all of the other Ottawa Youth Groups will come and participate in our program. We will also be hosting exchanges with other cities, possibly this spring and for sure early next year.

Our main goal is to keep Jewish Youth in the city active together, in a reform setting, by meeting each other, studying together and having a lot of fun.

Ahead with A.Z.A. Boys

By Steven Cohen, President

A.Z.A. is the boys' component of the B'nai B'rith Youth Organization.

The objectives of A.Z.A. are to help young Jewish people achieve personal growth according to their individual capacities, so that they may lead satisfying lives in the Jewish community and the larger community of which they are a part.

A.Z.A. helps its members identify themselves with the common aspirations of the Jewish people, and the State of Israel.

A.Z.A. offers group experiences in the social, athletic, cultural, community service, and religious areas.

The Ottawa chapter of A.Z.A., B'nai Amitai, is part of the Lake Ontario Region, which includes the cities of Hamilton, Toronto, Rochester, and Buffalo.

There are out of town events throughout the year, such as the Fall convention which was held this season in Buffalo, the Regional Athletic Tournament Rochester and Spring Convention which will be held this year in Toronto. We have programs regularly in all areas and we are presently in the process of forming a floor hockey league.

If you would like more information about A.Z.A. please call Ian Borer at 232-7306, or me at 733-8583.

We're the Chai Girls

By Susan Margles, Vice-President

Chai, one of the two chapters for girls of the B'nai B'rith Youth Organization, has everything for girls 15 and over.

We meet regularly, usually at the Jewish Community Centre, and have such activities as dances, exercise programs, community service projects and Judaic content programs.

Being a member of B.B.Y.O. and Chai not only means meeting people in Ottawa, but also making friends in other cities in our great region. These other cities include Toronto, Hamilton, Rochester, Syracuse and Buffalo.

Conventions are a big part of Chai and are held at least three times a year in different cities.

All in all joining Chai means a lot of fun and many great memories.

If you have any questions or would like to register with our group please feel free to call me (the vice-president) at 722-7185, or our trusted advisor Val Eisen at 820-8311. We'll welcome your involvement with open arms. Hope to see you soon.

Hi from Hechadash

By Karen Trainoff

As President of this chapter, I know what B'nai B'rith can do for you, do you?

You will meet many new people that can develop into lasting friendships. These people that you meet will be from Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, Buffalo and Rochester.

I am the President of the newest chapter in Ottawa. Our name is Hechadash, which means "The New One". Our group is very active and enthusiastic. Members range in age from 13-15 years old.

The girls in our group knew very little about B'nai B'rith six months ago and are now very involved in all areas of B'nai B'rith work.

Several weeks ago a group of us went to Buffalo for a convention, which was a great learning experience. Several of us, over the winter holidays, attended an Athletic Tournament in Rochester.

We have a lot of varied activities in Ottawa; we've had a slumber party with Chai (the older girls chapter); we attended a Blood Donor Clinic where we acted as volunteers; and we also had a coffee house and a sports evening.

In addition we work on increasing Jewish identity in a positive and creative way.

We often meet at the Jewish Community Centre or at the home of one of our members. Our programs are held either in the evening or on weekends.

At the beginning of this article I mentioned only one example of what B'nai B'rith can do for you. There are many more.

I hope that this gives you a brief outline of what we do. If you have any questions please call me at 829-0576.

Welcome to Dror

By Sam Goldstein

No matter how brilliantly one may describe his youth group — one can never capture the true essence of his group.

There is much more to Dror-Habonim than the description you are about to read. It is for this reason, we at Dror-Habonim encourage you, the reader, to drop in at one of our meetings to find out what we really are, and have to offer.

We are a "Labour Zionist Youth Movement". Movement, not a group. We have goals that we try and "move" towards.

What our goals are, are captured in the first part of our title. "Labour Zionist". This means Chaiutik Aliyah. Aliyah, as in moving to Israel to live. Chaiutik, as in living on kibbutz. We are affiliated with the Talhum (United Kibbutz Movement), and as such we support the Labour Party of Israel.

We are not dogmatic. We try and give our members a general awareness of the problems that face the Jew in Israel. The Jew in the Galut. The Jew in the World.

Our membership is open to grades 5 and up. The groups consist of Amelim (grades 5, 6 and 7), Chutrim (grades 8 and 9), Bonim (grades 10 and 11), and Madrachim/Ma'apalim (grades 12 and up). As of now we have a steady membership of 20 people per group. We meet almost every Friday night at 8:15 at 1547 Chatelaine. Since different groups meet on a rotational basis, it is best to call for exact dates of our meetings.

For more information you may contact me at 728-0607.

Jewish Men's Basketball

This fall, the Jewish Community Centre organized a Jewish Men's Basketball league involving 40 enthusiastic participants, age 20 and 40, in a team league.

The blue team, led by Larry Szpirglas and Jeff Polowin captured the pennant during the regular season play. The championship was won, however, by the red team, 48-46, led by the ball handling of Lloyd Rossman and a dramatic last second winning basket by Aaron Huttman.

Bill Holzman and Bill Berger led the green team in a losing cause.

The success of the league is largely attributable to the organizational efforts of Ron Boro, Murray Ages, and Teami Captains, Les Berrell, Jeff Pleet, Arron Shier and Eric Schwartz. As a result of the continuing interest for basketball in the Jewish Community, the league has started a new winter season.

All adult males interested in participating in the basketball program can register with Ron Boro or the J.C.C. at 232-7306, or Murray Ages at 238-1333. We will undertake to provide as many teams and suitable court time, dependent on the number of people who are interested for the future.

Sign up for Jewish Men's Softball now

The Jewish Men's Softball League has attracted unprecedented involvement for Jewish men between the ages of 16 to 50.

The baseball league has provided recreation and in particular has served as an integrating force for newcomers to Ottawa who are not otherwise familiar with the members of our community. We are prepared to welcome as participants as many people as possible.

Since the league has grown, the work involved in organizing it has become more complicated and necessitates advanced planning many months before the season actually begins. To do our best to assure everyone will have a team, it is necessary for new players to indicate their intentions now.

We are interested in having people come forward who are prepared to serve as team captains. If you have not played in the Jewish Men's Baseball League before, or are a newcomer to this city, and have not yet made arrangements to play for a team, contact Ron Boro at the J.C.C., 232-7306 immediately. All persons interested in organizing teams should contact Murray Ages, 238-1333, or Rick Labovitch at 728-6607.

WHEN YOUR PHONE RINGS ON SUPER SUNDAY MARCH 14th SPEAK UP FOR MOSHE DAYAN AND ANWAR SADAT.

A lot of people believed that when Moshe Dayan and Anwar Sadat died within ten days of each other, hopes for stability and peace in the Mideast died with them.

Khadafy was elated. So were international terrorists. And all of those who see war in the Mideast as a way to achieve their political goals. And eliminate Israel forever.

But the spirit of Dayan and Sadat and their dream of peace for the Mideast lives on. And it is up to you to help make their dream come true.

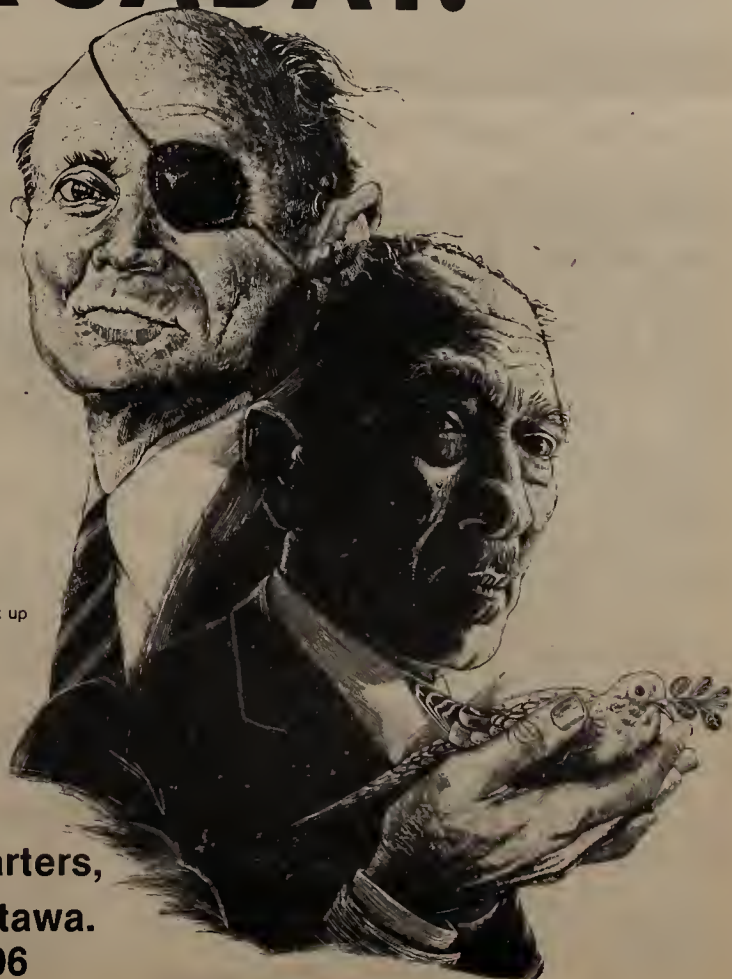

On Sunday, March 14th, the largest communications network we've ever tried will be in operation.

We call it Super Sunday.

The medium of communication will be the telephone. Be a part of it.

Make sure you are at home to answer your phone, to join with us in this show of solidarity. To give as much as you can to help the people of Israel and keep the spirit of Jewish brotherhood alive everywhere on earth.

When your phone rings on Sunday, March 14th, speak up for Moshe Dayan and Anwar Sadat and their dream of peace for the Mideast. And for the people all over the world.

The Viners establish an Endowment Fund

Arthur and Sonia Viner will observe their Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary on February 26 and it is characteristic of them that they should mark this milestone in their lives by establishing an Endowment Fund which will benefit the Jewish Community in perpetuity.

Sensitive and idealistic people who have been intimately involved in the work of the Labour Zionist Movement the better part of their adult lives, the Viners have imbued their children and grandchildren with their own love of Israel and commitment to Jewish life.

The Viner Family saga in Ottawa begins in 1910 when Arthur's father Zisa arrived in the capital from Zhitomir, Russia. The following year he brought out his wife and three children and in due course, the rest of the family. All settled in Ottawa.

Arthur majored in accounting at school and then worked for many years under the Comptroller of the Treasury in the Department of Veterans Affairs. Subsequently, he became Chief of the Pension and War Veterans Allowance Division. He served in that post until 1969 when he resigned due to ill health after forty years of distinguished public service. During the 1967 Centennial Year, he was awarded the Silver Medal.

From early childhood, he has worshipped at Congregation Machzikei Hadas. He has been Financial Secretary as well as Financial Chairman of the Synagogue and for a time, represented Machzikei Hadas on the Ottawa Vaad Ha'Ir.

On February 26, 1932, he married Sonia Goldman. Both believed in a Jewish State as an end to anti-semitism and Jewish homelessness. Arthur joined the Labour Zionist Movement. Sonia became active in Pioneer Women. Both groups worked diligently for the success of Histadrut Campaigns.

When the State of Israel Bond Organization was established in 1953, the Viners were in the forefront of the Civil Service and Labour Zionist Divisions. In 1964, Bonds joined with the Labour Zionists to fete him at a dinner in his honour.

Arthur and Sonia continue to support all worthwhile Jewish endeavour in Ottawa and in Israel. They are especially close to the Shaare Zedek Hospital in Jerusalem and to the Jewish National Fund. Canada Park has a Grove in their name. They have been to Israel several times and delight in its progress.

Sonia was born in Krasnastav, Ukraine and came to Ottawa in 1921 with her mother and four sisters. The girls attended York St. School and the High School of Commerce. Sonia then worked for A. J. Freiman Ltd. until her marriage.

A staunch and dedicated Zionist, Sonia was chosen in 1950 to chair the committee which created the first Ottawa Jewish Reference and Telephone Directory. It has been published continually since then and has become a valuable asset in every Jewish home in the community.

When Israel Bonds started, she became the first Pioneer Women's Chairman for Bonds. In 1959, she served as President of the Degania Group of Pioneer Women and later that year, founded the Chana Szenes Group. In 1969, she started a new trend, the Imaginary or Phantom Tea. The idea has been emulated by most Zionist organizations.

Sonia was the honoree at a testimonial dinner tendered by the Pioneer Women of Ottawa in 1971. In appreciation for her dedicated services, she was presented with a silver tray.

Mrs. Viner is also the first Life Member of the Machzikei Hadas Sisterhood and a Life Member of Pioneer Women and the Ottawa Jewish Home for the Aged.

They have two children, Gladys Greenberg of Ottawa and Walter of Kingston. There are eight grandchildren.

The Arthur and Sonia Viner Endowment Fund is opened and friends and relatives may add to it at any time. The Viners will be consulted as to the disposition of the income earned from the capital investment each year.

The Board of Directors of the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation extends its appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Viner and is pleased to join their family and friends in wishing them every happiness on the occasion of their Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary.

Champagne Brunch to be held in Florida

Dorothy Nadolny and Phyllis Sternthal, Co-Chairmen of the Ottawa Snowbirds of the Women's Division, U.J.A., send news from Florida. They have succeeded in organizing what promises to be a most attractive and exciting function for Ottawa women who are presently in Florida: A Champagne Brunch, to take place on Wednesday, February 9.

Hosts are Eleanor and Paul Wiener, former Ottawans who now make their home in Hollywood, Florida. Still mindful of their Ottawa roots, the Wieners have graciously offered to open their beautiful home to Ottawa Snowbirds. Admission is by a minimum increase over last year's U.J.A. contribution of $100.00. An interesting program has been planned, and it is hoped that every Ottawa woman in the area will be there.

The Snowbirds are a new category of the Women's Division. Initiated last year by Ethel Taylor, they held a successful "Welcome Back Snowbirds" Breakfast at the home of Ray Gould. The aim of the group, however is to get together while they are enjoying the warmth and sunshine of their home away from home in Florida, and show the folks back home that they are still part of the U.J.A. Campaign. This year's function is the first of its kind, but Dorothy and Phyllis hope it will become an annual event.

Temple preschool pilot successful

A pilot project, under the auspices of Temple Israel Religious School, began its first year in September 1981. Twelve preschoolers, ages 3 and 4, are attending Religious School on Sunday morning, with successful results.

The children attend school with their older brothers and sisters, and are included in Temple activities.

The classroom is large and bright, and contains play equipment, including books, toys, blocks, sand and water play, arts and crafts, music and puzzles. Both teachers are graduates of the Temple's teacher-training program, and Rabbi Marcus visits the classroom weekly.

A Jewish Home Centre has been created with a menorah, seder plate, Kiddish cup, candlesticks, etc., with a view to giving the children the opportunity to bring their Jewishness to life.

Hebrew is an important part of the curriculum. Letters and words have been introduced, and reinforced with arts and crafts, music, and stories, and with the help of Nigel Harris, music specialist, the children learn many new Hebrew songs.

The curriculum is a new approach, designed by Rabbi Daniel Syme, of the Education Department of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. His ideas appeal to the creative teacher as a series of behavioral goals which must be met using all of the senses, and upon which primary grade teachers are able to expand.

Anyone interested in learning more about this program, and Temple Israel Religious School, call Ruth Marcus — 224-1802.

Earns Ph.D.

Henry Makow, son of Dr. and Mrs. David Makow, recently obtained a Ph.D. in English majoring in Canadian Literature, from the University of Toronto.

Henry began his career at the age of eleven when he started a weekly column "Ask Henry" which was syndicated in 50 newspapers in Canada and U.S.A.

He also wrote more serious articles and worked with the Ottawa Journal and the Jerusalem Post.

JSU-Hillel

Student reaction was generally favorable. One "neutral" observer said, "We're always hearing so much from the Arab point of view. I'm glad to hear something from the other side."

After the event, the Jewish students felt they should have had questions ready for the panel and should have spoken in English if necessary.

More information on the Middle East is available to anyone wishing to attend a free seminar in Toronto on Sunday, February 7, at 9:30 a.m. at 788 Marlee Avenue.

The Israel Consulate and Canadian Universities Bureau has assembled a team of experts who will work on issues of concern to Jewish students on campus. For reservations call (416) 928-9160 or (416) 968-2891.

"Tu B'Shvat Plant-A-Tree Telethon"

conducted by The Jewish National Fund of Ottawa

On Tu B'Shvat — the New Year of Trees — Israelis of all walks of life and ages take to the hills and open spaces to plant trees with their own hands. It is a holiday of joy and tribute, attesting to the special significance of trees in the strengthening of the nation. Thus, progress and beauty are created in a country where centuries of war and neglect had left little but a vast desolation.

As the first signs of awakening Spring herald the renewal of nature's cycle in our precious land, we call on every family in Ottawa to express his faith in the future of the Jewish People by saying "SHALOM ISRAEL" with trees to mark this happy occasion. Every new tree affirms our solidarity with the valiant people of Israel in the struggle for peace and security.

P.S. If we miss you and you wish to plant, kindly call us at 820-3835 or return the order form.

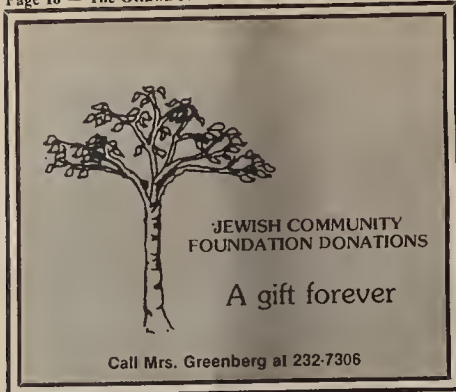

PLEASE RESPOND GENEROUSLY TO OUR VOLUNTEER TELETHON OPERATORS AND HELP TO BUILD ISRAEL'S TOMORROW... TODAY.

TELETHON CHAIRMAN

Twelve finalists selected from Grade 5 to 8 answered a series of written and verbal questions based on previous International Bible Contest questions. Twelve students participated in three rounds of questioning and three finalists and a runner-up were chosen to participate in the National Bible Contest which will be held in Toronto before the end of the school year.

Yossi Bouchris, a member of the Hillel Academy Teaching Staff co-ordinated the Program.

Establish Fund to mark 70th birthday

The Officers and Directors of the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation welcome the establishment of the "Israel and Polly Cohen Endowment Fund" by family and friends on the occasion of Israel Cohen's 70th birthday. Born in Buckingham, Quebec, Issie is the son of Martha and the late Max Cohen. The family moved to Ottawa where, as he was growing up, Issie worked in his father's kosher butcher shop in the original stone Market Building.

In 1937 he opened the By Ward Meat Market which he operated until 1971 when he sold the business to become an active partner in the firm of Cohen and Cohen.

In 1943 he married Polly Landsman, formerly of Montreal.

An active member of Machzikei Hadas Synagogue (his father was one of the founders of the original "Murray Street" Shul), Issie is a member of B'nai B'rith and a life member of Hillel Lodge. Polly is a devoted wife and mother. She is a member of B'nai B'rith, and as well, she is active in Machzikei Hadas Sisterhood and is a life member of Hadassah. She is presently employed as an assistant manager at the Billings Bridge branch of Henry Birks and Sons Ltd.

The couple has three children — Anna (Cantor), Eric and Ivan — and six grandchildren.

The Israel and Polly Cohen Endowment Fund is opened and family and friends may add to it at any time. The capital will be invested in perpetuity and used to further charitable and educational causes. The couple will be consulted each year as to the disposition of the income.

On Saturday, January 23, the Young People's Division of United Jewish Appeal held their First Annual Dinner Dance at the Embassy West Hotel. Over 130 people braved the worst storm of the winter season to demonstrate their commitment to this city's U.J.A. Campaign.

Those in attendance were further treated to a moving and informative address from Rabbi Reuven Bulka. Jody Streat, the 1982 YPD Chairman concluded the line-up of speakers, stressing local and world-wide U.J.A. beneficiaries.

Following the dinner, a dance was held in Disco Reflections.

In all, the evening raised approximately $3,000. If anything, Saturday, January 23, was not only an enjoyable and successful evening, but a strong representation of the dedicated and spirited U.J.A. youth alliance in this community.

The event proved that we are, indeed, one people indivisible!

Shalom Ottawa pilot to be aired Feb. 11

By Doreen Livingstone

"Shalom Ottawa" returns to the small screen on Thursday, February 11 at 8:30 p.m.

A revamped version of the former half-hour cable television show will premiere on Skyline Cable 12 and will be repeated on Skyline and Ottawa Cablevision Saturday, February 13 at 8:30 p.m., and again on Ottawa Cablevision, Monday, February 15 at 5:30 p.m. Four more shows will be aired in March, April, May and June.

Shalom Ottawa will attempt to inform, educate and entertain both Jews and non-Jews in a half-hour magazine style show. Regular segments will include a feature interview; What's Cooking?; Ask the Rabbi; a Community Update; and Israel Today.

Co-hosts of Shalom Ottawa are Susan Finestone, formerly of Montreal and Jonathan Isserlin, a family physician with several years experience in writing and broadcasting. Mona Wasserman will host the community update segment.

Merida Sachs is producer of Shalom Ottawa. She has done work for CJOH TV and was involved in the original production. She is a past president of the National Council of Jewish Women, a member of the Executive Committee of the Jewish Community Council and co-chairman of its Community Relations Committee as well as publicity chairman for U.J.A. She also has her own video production company.

The volunteer production committee includes Kitty Hoffman, Ellen Bessner, Lynn Herzig, Marcia, Doreen Livingstone, Elena Lappin, Susan Finestone, Marion Silver and Dr. Jonathan Isserlin.

To make the production a success, the "crew" of Shalom Ottawa needs the support and input of its audience. Suggestions and criticisms are invited and any ideas for upcoming shows will be given careful consideration. Contact Noa Heilman, staff co-ordinator at 232-7306, or Merida Sachs at 829-4540.
